PINCHOT ADMITS HIS CAMPAIGN EXPENSE WAS OVER $150,000

Governor Declares He Maintained Two Organizations

PERSONAL COST ONLY $3,767.31

Much Money Obtained By Committee, He Tells Senators

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, June 9—Governor Pinchot told the senate campaign funds committee today he and his state-wide organization had contributed something over $154,000 to his unsuccessful senatorial campaign against Senator Pepper and Representative Vane.

The governor, who was the initial witness, first described his campaign organization, naming C. Jay Goodenough, of Harrisburg, as his state-wide manager and P. S. Stahlacker as treasurer. Besides his main organization, with headquarters in Philadelphia, he said he had a special organization in Western Pennsylvania, with headquarters in Pittsburgh.

Witness said his own personal expenditures were only $3,767.31.

"Did your state-wide committee collect any money?" asked Chairman Reed.

"Yes."

"Have you knowledge of the amount?"

"I have a general knowledge as reported to me by the treasurer."

Stahlacker presented a statement which Reed said showed collections of $119,324.13.

"Does that include certain items you contributed?" asked Senator McNary, republican, Oregon.

Pinchot said it included $6,000 which he had covered in his personal return.

"Then the total is something over $154,000?" asked Reed.

"Yes."

"Was money collected by your western headquarters?"

"Yes."

Charles G. McGovern, Pinchot's manager in Pittsburgh, presented a statement showing collections of $5,885.

"That includes about $2,000 received for Philadelphia," the governor explained.

"Did your committee receive any money outside the money?" asked Reed.

"I assume so, though I have no knowledge of the amount," said Pinchot.

The governor said his own wife was one of the heaviest contributors and declared the returns in Allegheny county (Pittsburgh) had been held up and he was asked by Senator Goff, republican of West Virginia, whether he had any knowledge that the returns were "changed."

"No" was the reply. "I base it only on reports that came to me and those published in the newspapers."

New Story Will Be Mose Vivid of the Year, Starts Soon

What is termed the most vivid story of the year will appear serially in the Daily within the next few days. The story "Broken Hearts of Hollywood," by Edward Clark is the story of the girl and boy who go to Hollywood, movie kingdom, seeking fame and fortune upon the silver screen. They are the winners of beauty and personality contests in their home towns and go to Hollywood at the invitation of the movie producing companies which have put on these contests. Their trials and triumphs are told in the unraveling of a beautiful love story, appealing in every sense of the word. Start with the first installment, in the next few days.

KILBY PARTY WILL GO TO THE SHOALS

Anniston Friends Will Be In Audience at Joint Debate

Accompanied by a twenty-piece band, a party composed of about 70 Anniston citizens will pass through here sometime today enroute to Huntsville, where they will spend the night, before going to the Tri-Cities Thursday for the first of the series of joint debates between Thomas E. Kilby and John H. Bankhead, senatorial candidates.

Reservations have been made in Huntsville for the party tonight, press dispatches state. The trip will be made in automobiles, and all members of the party will be equipped with Kilby ribbons, Kilby arguments and Kilby literature, according to word received here today.

Mr. Bankhead, advised at his home in Jasper of the intention of the Calhoun county people to be present at the debate, is quoted as saying "the more the merrier."

First Debate To Be Held on June 10

(Associated Press)

FLORENCE, Ala., June 9—June 10 is the date set for the opening here of a series of joint debates between John H. Bankhead of Jasper, Ala., and Thomas E. Kilby of Anniston, Ala., candidates for the U. S. Senate.

The debate was originally intended to center around the Muscle Shoals question but both men have agreed to open the debate for a general argument.

Following the debate here on Thursday, the two candidates are scheduled to shift the scene the next day, June 11, to Sheffield and then to Tusculum on the day following.

At each debate one hour will be allowed for the opening speech by each candidate; one hour and a half for the second speech and 30 minutes for rebuttal. By agreement between the two candidates, W. H. Mitchell, of Florence will act as presiding officer.

BUSINESS MEN TO MEET ON DIAMOND

Baseball Game Marks First Half Holiday In Twin Cities

Marking their first half holiday, under the new agreement negotiated this week, business men of Albany and Decatur plan to meet on the baseball diamond at Malone Park at three o'clock Thursday afternoon.

Harland H. Hunter has been designated as manager of the Albany business men's club, while John McGee has been designated as the Decatur leader.

A cordial invitation was issued to the public to join in the fun. "If you want to see a rotten ball game, come out, the admission is free," was the cryptic invitation of Mr. Hunter.

Mr. Bankhead, advised at his home in Jasper of the intention of the Calhoun county people to be present at the debate, is quoted as saying "the more the merrier."

Burns Infected, Fire Chief Suffers

W. H. Sorber, chief of the Albany fire department, is receiving medical treatment after having suffered severe burns about his head, the burns having become infected.

While the department was fighting a fire recently at the Hudson residence in South Albany, falling plaster and sparks struck the fire chief in the head. Little attention was paid to the matter at the time, the injuries not being serious it was believed. Later, however, infection set in and Chief Sorber has been suffering considerable pain. He still is able to be out, however.

Officers Elected By Rising Sun

The following officers were elected last night by Rising Sun Lodge No. 29: J. T. Nelson, W. M.; J. G. McGee, senior warden; C. J. M. Hill, Jr., junior warden; C. J. Holesapple treasurer; E. E. Dickinson, secretary; W. H. Wise, senior deacon; J. H. Blackwell, junior deacon; G. W. Lawhorn, tyler.

In recognition of the services of the officers during the past year, there was an advancement of the entire line, except that Messrs. Holesapple and Dickinson were re-elected treasurer and secretary respectively.

Pair Pays the Extreme Penalty For Slaying Two Women

(Associated Press)

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 9—William (Wah) Martin, Little Rock negro convicted of the murder of Mrs. Lena Blevins and Albert Jones, Mississippi county negro, under death sentence for the murder of a negro woman, were electrocuted at the Arkansas penitentiary at sunrise today.

The execution of Martin was witnessed by R. F. Cushing, father of the murdered woman, and several members of her family.

Officers believe Martin to have been the slayer of five other women in the Fourche bottoms, south of Little Rock during the past few years.

After he had been strapped in the electric chair, a last minute effort was made to secure a statement regarding these crimes.

Warden Clifton Evans, of the penitentiary, questioned the negro, after first admonishing him that "he could not hope to meet his maker if he went to his death with a lie on his lips."

"I see only guilty of one murder, the one I see charged with," he told the warden.

"Are you sure Wash that you know nothing of the other murders?" the warden asked.

"Not that I know of," were the negro's last words.

Child Killed By Fall From Auto

AT THIS TIME of year Uncle Sam needs money, and finance is amazed that he should be able to get along with as little as two hundred million dollars.

That amount Mr. Mellon will borrow, at only three per cent interest. Many will wonder why Uncle Sam must borrow, when he might make money as good as gold, pay no interest and call in the money, when ready to pay. There is a reason.

CROP DOES WELL OVER ALABAMA

Harvesting of Oats In State Becoming General Now

(Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, June 9—The department of agriculture in its weekly review of conditions in Southern states for the week ended yesterday said that while the cotton crop is much later than usual, progress was fair to satisfactory except where it continued too dry in parts of the east and too cool in the more northeastern district.

Progress was noted in Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana the east gulf states and much of Georgia. Growth was slow in Tennessee because of cool weather and the drought in much of the interior of the Carolinas and parts of northern Georgia was still unrelieved.

Except in the dry interior southeast truck and minor crops made satisfactory progress.

Condition in Alabama: Crop generally doing well and conditions mostly fair to good; corn planting continues harvesting oats becoming general; digging and marketing potatoes progressing; cotton mostly fair to good; though still late; cultivation generally good; chopping continues.

Ward's Message Sent By Pigeon

Five Poisoned By Dinner at Home of Memphis Resident

(Associated Press)

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 9—W. Poston Maury, Memphis business man, two members of his family, his niece and a French governess in his employ were in a local hospital today suffering from apparent ptomaine poisoning.

Early this morning attending physicians reported Mr. Maury's condition as critical. The condition of the others was of a lesser degree, none being considered serious. Those stricken are: W. Poston Maury, Sr., Napoleon F. Maury, Richard B. Maury, Kate Hardy, 11, niece and Mme. Marie Guillard.

Exact cause of poisoning had not been determined early this morning, although physicians accredited it to food served at dinner attended by ten persons at the home of Mr. Maury last evening. Others participating in the dinner were not affected.

Mr. Maury is president of the Maury-Newsome company and holds interest in other Memphis business concerns and is prominent socially.

NEW YORK CENTRAL ANNOUNCES MERGER

Closer Union Between The Lines Sought By the New Plan

(Associated Press)

NEW YORK, June 9—The New York Central railroad company today announced plans for consolidation of its principal subsidiaries, The Michigan Central the Cleveland, Cincinnati Chicago and St. Louis and the Cincinnati Northern railroads, through long term leases.

At the same time the company will increase its authorized capital stock from $400,000,000 to $500,000,000.

Control of the Michigan Central and the "Big Four" has rested with the New York Central for sometime and the present move is designed to effect a closer financial and operating union of the line. Directors of the subsidiary companies have approved the leases which run for 999 years and stockholders of the New York Central will vote upon them at a special meeting next September.

The proposed lease of the Michigan Central calls for an annual rental, including a dividend on the Michigan Central stock pledged as collateral for the three and one half per cent collateral bond and an amount equal to 50 per cent on Michigan Central stock not owned by the New York Central which amounts to less than one per cent.

OTHER CANDIDATES ON SCENE TO MEET CROWDS OF PEOPLE

Jasper and Anniston To Be Represented at Platform Clash

MUD-SLINGING IS ABSENT SO FAR

Political Battle of Two Orators Expected To Be Spectacular

(Associated Press)

FLORENCE, Ala., June 9—Friends of John H. Bankhead and Thomas E. Kilby, candidates for the senate, were pouring into Florence today for the three joint debates to be held June 10 and 11 and 12 in the Muscle Shoals district. Scores already have arrived by motor car and train while others are enroute though the county and on the railroads.

Other candidates for various offices will be here to shake hands, although none will have opportunity to speak at the Bankhead-Kilby meeting.

Jasper is sending a large delegation to root for Bankhead and Anniston will be represented in the interest of the former governor.

It is expected the debate will be red hot and that enthusiasm in the opposing camps will make for the spectacular in politics.

So far there has been no mud-slinging or injection of personalities and friends of each candidate are hopeful that the debate will be upon a high plain. It is known however that each candidate will attempt to take the bark.

Patterson Will Speak at Cullman

Andrew G. Patterson will deliver an address at Cullman Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock at the Cullman County courthouse. The address will mark Mr. Patterson's first invasion of Cullman county where he already has a great many friends who predict his success in the county. Mr. Patterson will come from central Alabama where he is talking this week.

First House Built In Albany Brought "Echols Hill" Name

Just now when a greater portion of the public eye of these cities is riveted upon the subject of "Echols Hill" repair, J. L. Echols tells the interesting story of the naming of the hill. Mr. Echols declares that the hill received its name when he built the first house in Albany, 36 years ago, upon the brow of the hill. He declared that the first house on that plot was burned and that he sold the land to D. W. Speake who in turn sold to the present owner, Mrs. Jessie Thoms. Mr. Echols stated that at the time the house was built that the foundation for the present Louisville and Nashville shops was being laid.

SYNOPSIS

Molly Cochran, now doing dramatic writing in New York, goes to Washington to see her husband, former Texas Governor, whom she left when fearful she would imperil his political future. He is now engaged in war work. But Cochran pretends not to know her. His wife, he says, was drowned, as newspapers reported. Molly's mission is to warn Cochran of another danger threatening him, but he refuses to listen.

He put her into a taxi, gave some order to the driver. After a time she told him incoherently, a little here and a little there—everything. It was mercy and salvation to have him to tell it to—be able to talk about it. "You must let me go to him," he said at last. "You see, you didn't really explain anything."

"I couldn't—he wouldn't let me."

"I'm the logical one to do it, anyhow. He's probably jealous as the devil."

Molly shook her head. "No, he's not jealous. He's not anything. For him I simply don't exist, that's all. Besides this other woman."

"Don't you see how it would look—like a dog in the manger—as if I'd only come back to stop him from marrying her? No, I shall never tell him—I didn't mean to tell him. Anyway, it doesn't matter about me. I want only his happiness."

"And I want only what is for your happiness. . . . I know." She laid her hands for a moment over his. "I can't think what I should have done if you hadn't come."

CHAPTER XXXI

It was not until she was saying goodbye to Eldredge at the station in New York some weeks later that she remembered to tell him just how much his coming had meant. There was something beautiful and rare about this affection which had sprung up from not the most promising of beginnings.

Her last glimpse of him was from the train window.

Eldredge had done everything in his power to induce her to let him act as mediator between her and Cochran; to bring about some understanding of it not of reconciliation. Having failed, he held his conscience clear. He had hoped that she would come back from this absurd pilgrimage at least resigned, ready to take what life still held for her and make the best of it.

"Two are better than one," you know," he reminded her in the last half minute before the train pulled out. His mouth twisted a little with the effort to keep it casual and humorous. "For if they fall the one will lift up his fellow, but woe to him that is alone when he falleth."

Molly bent forward and put both her hands over his. "Myron, I can't count myself alone when I have a friend like you. You've lifted me up times without number—picked up the pieces and put them together again."

He crushed the hands between his, got to his feet. The train was beginning to move. "It's all right," he said, with another abrupt, hurtful pressure of her hands took himself off.

Her last glimpse of him was from the train window—head bare, smiling and waving to her—that veiled, boyish eagerness in the front, old-young eyes, the seamed and corded old-young face. It cut to the heart somehow—she was really fond of him.

Molly was going home—home—not to Laws' Chapel, but to her native state, the Capitol, the university—the Gothic spires Stephen had malign.

Stephen she shuddered away from that thought as from too many others. Stephen had paid his debt. It debt he owed. Eldredge had chanced on his name in a column of hundreds dead. It seemed he had found work in an ammunition factory—some last spasmodic twitching perhaps of self-respect, some genuine shame at her having seen him as a waiter, a flunky in uniform. There had been an explosion. Such things were constantly happening now. She had resisted the impulse to send the clipping to Greg—on the eve of sailing again for France. Eldredge had brought her this information, too. Information not trusted, of course, to the newspapers.

Once across the border into her own state, her heart stirred faintly to great stretches of black-and-white prairie with the corn showing new and shoddily green; to oil derricks bristling on every hand like a particularly dusky variety of cactus; to blue-bonnet sheathing hill and plain with dazzling, far-flung scarfs of blue lazuli; to sand and heat and April sunshine; to ugly little towns with the assembled populations crowded round the ugly, yellow-buff stations to watch the "Limited" go through.

What struck her most as she stepped at last from the train at the little red brick capital station was that everything seemed so unchanged. It was like an enchanted city, drowsing there in the late afternoon sun—the Avenue, the Capitol, the "Mansion," the Gothic spires—waiting, perhaps for her return.

The campus was changed most of all. Several fine new buildings, a dozen sprawling wooden "shacks," huddled the bluebonnets, once undisputed April monarchs, into pitifully cramped quarters. They were there, though, still—thousands of quaint, wise little bluebonnets, nodding and swaying to the wind, plunder for greedy herds of pollen-gathering bees. Molly waded out halfway to her knees in them, glanced round, dropped quickly to the ground. She smothered her face in the blossoms, pressed her lips to the fragrant, warm earth beneath. Her earth. . . . She remembered that other homecoming so long ago. Autumn it had been—and how she had longed then to stoop and kiss the earth beneath her feet.

She laid herself over behind the Gothic towers, and the Southern dusk did cool, scented penance for the heat and burden of the day. A slim new moon lifted its silver horn above the chapel's ivied buttresses, and still Molly lingered on—to think and to dream. . . . The past rushed over her like the first deep whiff of ether, bore her down, blotted out new landmarks. Faces, voices, scenes—some long forgotten. She thought of Mrs. Parker, Mrs. Parker with her little blue-knot body, her humor-wrinkled face, her heart of gold—gone long since to her reward. A rich and generous reward it must be.

She thought of her mother in the faded calico wrapper, thrusting back the damp tendrils from her face with the worn, harassed motion. Her mother—she had spent herself, her youth, her strength, her very bone and blood, to bring them forth. She had shriveled and fallen into dust like a dried seed pod after the seeds are scattered. And what had they done for her? Nothing, nothing at all. . . . She thought of her father, bland and benignant in his unpaid for pine coffin—of Larry. . . .

On the Avenue, she had noted a handsome black-and-gold sign, lettered, "Judge James Larabee Shannon." She had passed and repassed it—lingeringly; old ties, old affections, straining fiercely at her heart. But, no, it was better not—better always the dead should remain dead, better the ghostly should not intrude their ghostliness on the living. He was prosperous, successful, with position to be maintained, no doubt. There might be bitterness and recrimination, the old flame of intolerance breaking out. Strange they had all been like that; deep down, perhaps, affection, but at the surface reacting on one another like vitriol and corrosive sublimate. Strange that the mildest and gentlest of women should have brought forth such a quarrelsome, contentious brood.

Stephen—the thought of him persisted too. Stephen strolling round the corner at dusk with his imitable leasurality. . . . Stephen smiling at her his sphinxlike God-out-of-machine smile. Stephen glorious and beautiful to her as a god. Stephen in flunky's uniform, hurrying to help Eldredge with his coat, accepting his fee—Stephen of the trembling hands and twitching muscles. Then Stephen—torn, mangled, blown perhaps to atoms—dust to dust. It seemed too cruel, too dreadful.

That Molly he had feigned to love—that violent, headstrong Molly. She could all but see her swinging along the path now between the bluebonnets, with the buoyant, never-to-be-mistaken stride of one predestined, born, and steered toward freedom. She wore a gingham frock faded from many washings. There were hooks under her arm. From a ribbon dangled a floppy, home-made hat.

AMUSEMENTS

In "The Blind Goddess" Jack Holt descends the wide open spaces of the West where men are menaced for the criminal courts of the East, where men are innocent until proven guilty.

As a brilliant young prosecuting attorney faced with the dilemma of choosing between the girl he loves and his ideal of duty, Holt has a powerful dramatic role, radically different from any he has previously portrayed.

The story, directed by Victor Fleming, with Esther Ralston, Ernest Torrence and Louise Dresser sharing featured honors with Holt, was adapted from Arthur Train's widely read novel of the same name.

The location of the picture is New York, and the action ranges from the grim routine of the criminal courts to the smart social atmosphere of Fifth Avenue's exclusive homes. Romance, politics, mother love and a spectacular murder trial are deftly interwoven in a plot throbbing with human interest and genuine heart appeal. At the Princess Theater tomorrow.

Funeral services for Mrs. Fred M. Swift who died after a lingering illness of several months last Monday afternoon were held from the First Methodist church at three o'clock on Tuesday afternoon, being conducted by her former pastor, Rev. F. L. Aldridge, assisted by Rev. R. W. Anderson.

The large church was filled with relatives and friends of the deceased, and banked on the chancel railing was an array of most beautiful wreaths of many varieties, attesting her popularity among her large circle of friends.

Rev. Anderson spoke feelingly of his visits to the sick chamber and the welcome extended him on these visits, and the inspiration he gathered from each by the cheerfulness of the sufferer, who knew of the approaching end.

Rev. F. L. Aldridge spoke at length of his acquaintance and the helpfulness he gathered by contact with the optimistic spirit of the departed one, and drew a beautiful picture of the radiance of her cheerful and helpful life.

Mrs. Kathleen McGlathery of Albany, rendered a beautiful solo, "The City Four Square."

Services were completed at the grave, and a mound banked with beautiful flowers marked the last resting place of one who was universally loved and missed, and made cheerfulness one of the chief assets of her life.

Mr. and Mrs. Philander Gillespie of Madison attended the burial of their sister, Mrs. Fred M. Swift here on Tuesday afternoon.

Lieut. Joseph C. Gill, accompanied by Mrs. Gill arrived from Washington, D. C., Monday being summoned on the serious illness of his sister, Mrs. Swift, arriving a short time before her death.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira St. Clair of Cedar-town, Ga., are spending sometime with friends and relatives here. Mr. St. Clair is a former Hartselle boy, and is now chief train dispatcher for the Central of Georgia railroad.

C. E. Malone, road contractor is hauling out asphalt to the roads east and west of Hartselle, applying a top dressing in the repair program now being carried out over the county.

C. C. Cox of Birmingham is visiting relatives in Hartselle.

C. C. Robinson of Albany was in Hartselle Tuesday.

Splendid progress is now being made in the crops of this section, and under the influence of warm days and nights, plants are making rapid progress.

Sirens to warn the populace of the approach of the fire department equipment have been installed in Mobile and are now in use.

A new sewerage system will be installed in Selma following the letting of a contract which calls for an expenditure on the project estimated at $137,500.

College Stars Are Now With Lions

(Associated Press)

MONTGOMERY, Ala., June 9.—Four former college stars of Alabama schools now compose the infield of the Lions club here. Two from Howard, one from Auburn and one from Alabama are the representatives.

This is only a temporary arrangement, however, during the five day suspension of Joe Untz, regular third baseman, and the try-out of the new shortstop, fresh from the Howard diamond.

The present infield of the local Lion team is Conmaster (Alabama) first base, Griffin (Auburn) second base, Bains (Howard) shortstop, and Acton (Howard) third base.

Acton and Griffin started the season with the team, while Bains and Conmaster were just sent here by the Birmingham team of the Southern League. Acton is a regular outfielder Griffin was also sent here by the Birmingham Barons.

Conmaster made his local debut by getting a double and triple in five times at bat, being regarded as one

CONSIDERS SHE MADE WISE MOVE

When She Took Friends Advice and Tried the Great Herbal Remedy Known As Herb Juice

"I feel that I made a very wise move when I at last listened to the advice of one of my friends and started taking your wonder-herb extract known as Herb Juice, because it has certainly relieved me of a stubborn case of constipation and dizzy headaches of years standing," said Miss Clara Feuchet who resides at 308 South High street, Belleville, Ill., when she called to see the special representative at Reis Drug Store very recently.

In further relating her story of her condition before she had taken the great herbal remedy Miss Feuchet said, "For a number of years I have been a victim of the dreaded malady, constipation and from this badly constipated condition suffered a great deal from violent headaches which caused me to be very dizzy, nervous and irritable and was very restless at night. I tried all the different kinds of medicines and remedies that I could hear of, but without anything more than temporary relief. At last one day a friend of mine who had taken your great herb laxative insisted that I try it and said that it would do me good. I went straightway and got a bottle and before I had finished taking this great remedy I could see a decided change in my condition. I continued taking it and today I can truthfully say that I feel better in every respect than I have in years. My constipation has been entirely eliminated. I never suffer any more from those splitting headaches and I can now sleep the whole night through and arise in the mornings feeling physically fit to perform my daily tasks. I can't say enough in praise of this great remedy to justify the real genuine good it has done me, and I am truly glad to make this public statement in the hope that other sufferers may be induced to try it, because I am sure they will derive the same wonderful benefit from its use that I have."

He is to be a member of the faculty of Sidney Lanier high school here next fall and assist in coaching.

Red Griffin made an enviable reputation while a member of the Auburn team serving as captain more than once. His inexperience kept him from sticking this year with the Birmingham team and at present he is playing a stellar game with the locals.

Al Bains, shortstop, was sent here by the up-staters, and will be on trial pending the brand of ball he displays. Bains is regarded as one of the sweetest infielders ever in a Howard uniform, and Johnny Dobbs, manager of the Barons, predicts that Bains has a bright future, if he improves in his hitting.

Incidentally Montgomery has a new manager in Charles (Nig) Leonard right fielder, named to succeed Joe Brennan, who was released.

fashioned ideas if you prove one thing, you prove everything.

CHARLES HENRY, an able French scientist, believing that he has solved the secret of catalysis, the creation of energy through decomposition of bodies predicts a "hydrogen engine" that would use water, instead of gasoline, and "free France from foreign bondage for her motive power."

NATURE'S three greatest material gifts to man are free air, free water, free sunshine. If free power could be added, man's material troubles would be ended.

But Charles Henry's idea will remain the "demonstration" of a great mathematician, and will not run any engines, this year or next. Men are not ready, or fit, to be relieved from the pressure of hard work. They need it in their evolutionary processes.

FREE POWER unlimited, easily applied anywhere, would mean free nitrogen and that would mean free food.

With free food, the lazy, work-hating human race of today would become as worthless as the South Sea Islanders, that for centuries got their food without working for it. Mentally they never amounted to more than so many large rabbits.

PETER PIESMAYR worked hard saved his money, lost nearly all of it, then jumped into the river and died. He told his story in a few words, to his brother.

"I leave everything to you Michael. You can do as you wish with everything, only keep your hands from the stock business. And do not have too bad an opinion of me, Michael."

Poor fellow, caught by the stock ticker. Millions will sympathize with him. Don't gamble.

MEXICO is busy with new laws. In Mexico City marriage is under the control of the health department. No man or woman may be married, without presenting a health certificate, satisfactory to the government. Severe punishment is provided for priests or judges who perform marriages without certificates of health.

THE government says its intention is to prevent marriage by those having diseases that may be handed down to children. Fortunately such diseases are few, although they include at least one of the most dreadful diseases.

It may be offered as an abjection, that such a law interferes with "visiting the sins of the fathers upon the children."

WHEN anaesthesia for surgical operations was first discovered, a great majority of British clergymen objected, saying God wanted men to suffer, and to make a man unconscious under the surgeon's knife was to defy God's will. The young doctor who pointed out that God put Adam into a "deep sleep" before taking out his rib was angelic.

YOU can set up a wooden Indian at the edge of the sidewalk, but unless you anchor him firmly, he'll fall over.

Some brand new, made to order nations in Europe, created with a wave of the hand will prove to be wooden Indians, badly anchored.

It is unpleasant to mention names but some foolish Americans that have bought bonds issued by those wooden Indians are going to be unpleasantly surprised.

A nation that could not stand up, on its own account, will not remain outstanding, merely because someone has propped it up against the fence.

MERCHANT FINANCIAL WRECK

"I am a financial wreck because of the expense of doctors and medicine for my wife. She has been a chronic sufferer for 10 years. Some pronounced it gall stones, some gastritis and some intestinal inflammation. I happened to read of MAYR'S and from the first dose my wife has steadily improved. It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. AN UNTAMED EMOTION TAKES ITS TOLL

Persons Subject to Fits of Temper Soon Lose Their Friends as Well as Health, so Early Self-Control Should Be Taught.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

ANGER is one of the most dangerous enemies of mankind.

I do not mean that anger stalks about as a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour. But in your heart of hearts is an evil spirit, imprisoned most of the time but alert ever and ready to attack you on the first opportunity.

So many times you pick up a paper to read that this man or that has been stricken suddenly and died perhaps before help could reach him. Of course he might be asleep or calm when death came. In many a case, however, a fit of anger produced conditions which caused a blood vessel to break in the brain. Anger makes the heart beat so violently that it may feel sore and strained for days afterward. The emotions may involve the heart just as running, lifting, or hard labor may do.

The blood vessels have wonderful walls, elastic and firm. They are made this way to resist pressure. For fifty years they may serve you well. But all at once the vessel wall breaks and the blood rushes out to put pressure on the brain perhaps.

Did you ever see a man with the white of the eye red or purple from a broken blood vessel? Usually a blow or other injury is responsible for this condition. But some of the worst cases I ever saw followed a fit of anger, with the breaking of a blood vessel.

For the sake of good health, the child should be taught to be even-tempered. Peace and self-control are essential to the well-being of the individual.

Nobody admires men and women subject to fits of anger. They fly off the handle on the slightest pretext. They rave and carry on like wild people.

It isn't the way to do and children should be brought up to avoid such tantrums. When well trained in youth, they do not bring shame on themselves by these evil performances. Many a day of headache, weakness and ill feeling has followed a spell of violent anger. Many a grave has been filled in consequence of it.

When you see a friend about to break out in the antics of a fit of anger, put your hand on his shoulder, or put her on the hand. A moment of distraction may result in the quieting of disturbed feelings. This may prevent a spell of sickness.

Memorial Planned For Dr. Geo. Stuart

(Associated Press)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 9.—A memorial to Dr. George R. Stuart, late pastor of the First Methodist church here, is being promoted near his home in Cleveland, Tenn.

This was brought about at the instance of a Birmingham delegation which was in Tennessee at the funeral of Dr. Stuart. While there the suggestion was made that a girls school at Cleveland, Tenn., be named in honor of the late Methodist minister.

The movement was recently projected further by Dr. J. W. Malone, who is president of Centenary college for girls; the school whose name would be changed to George R. Stuart Memorial College, if the plans go through.

Dr. Malone, the president, spoke before the Chattanooga district conference recently held at Chattanooga and advocated the furtherance of this movement, proposing himself that the name of the college at Cleveland be changed to the George R. Stuart Memorial college. The suggestion seen to meet the approval of the conference, but no definite steps were taken toward that end.

Dr. Stuart was one of the founders of the school in 1884 and served as its president until 1890. The school was said to be always near the heart of the evangelist-preacher and it was a knowledge of his feeling toward it that caused the Birmingham delegation to father the suggestion.

In proposing the change in name to honor Dr. Stuart the Birmingham delegation also promised to contribute to a foundation for a fund to the college. The movement is expected also to meet with favor throughout this section and thus cause further pledges of financial support.

Dr. Malone expressed a belief that the movement would meet instantaneous response throughout the section where Dr. Stuart labored for most of his life, and that the Stuart Memorial college could be made the foremost girls' school of the south.

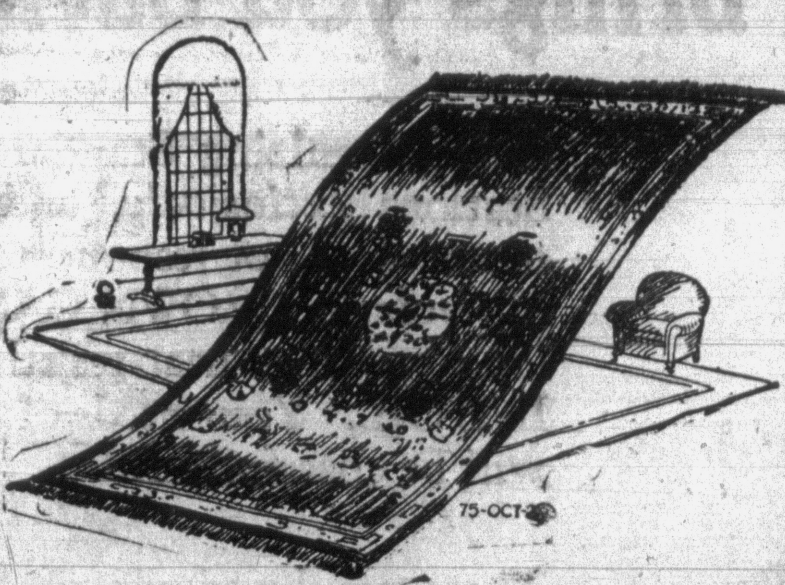

Dr. Stuart was one of Birmingham's strongest pastors occupying the pulpit here for eleven years, the longest tenure in Southern Methodism. The entire South joined Birmingham in mourning the loss of the well known minister.

TODAY
12 Years AgoFrom the Daily of
June 9, 1926

Lewis Cover and Sam Bartlett, local boys attending the United States Naval Academy, left Saturday on a tour of the world.

Henry Hartung is ill today.

Judge W. E. Skeggs is able to be out after an illness of several days.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Patterson and children are at Vinemont for the summer.

Miss Sadie Rolfe, of Lacey Springs, was in the cities today.

"Head is positive," says a headline in The Daily. Frequently the head is positive, but the heart is negative.

One fight the Democrats favor—the present row in the republican party.

If words were taxed the nation would soon be without its political speeches.

The public may be easily fooled, but it is not easily cooled once it finds it has been made the goat.

We have yet to see a motorist with a sign on the rear of his car, "Don't blow again, I'm moving over."

There are four candidates for governor, one, Andrew G. Patterson, has been tested as a business man.

Science has yet to discover where the North Alabama spring season went.

Dry cleaners at least reap a harvest before fall, the summer suit season is on.

Brookhart will now join the ranks of those faithfuls upholding the wishes of the "deah peopl."

The fellow who believes everything is going to be all right then sits down and waits for everything to be all right, usually awakes to find the value of lost labor.

The South has lost interest in Congress and adjournment, realizing that Congress adjourned several years ago so far as the settlement of Muscle Shoals was concerned.

If you still are of the opinion that industries seek location without the inducement of local capital, then try running up hills backward, the plan will prove as practical.

Much of the present temperature can be attributed to the weather and much to the political stir occasioned by the nearness of the August primaries.

Lots more good weather in store, says the weather man. One of the few cheerful things he has said since last December.

Regardless of how the newspapers feel in this political campaign the public will have lots of fun watching them fly at each others' throats.

Inasmuch as it is such a task to get two-thirds of the democrats to agree on anything, there may be merit in the proposal for repeal of the two-thirds rule.

Grantland Rice has been elected a member of the board of trustees of Vanderbilt University. Truly a tribute to sportdom.

The American lad, who got into trouble with the French military authorities, will be saved from the firing squad by the intervention of American authorities, but this fact doesn't make his conduct any the less reprehensible.

IF YOU HAVE GOOD BUSINESS OR NOT,
SMILE AND KEEP GOING

You have heard it truthfully said before that a "hang dog" expression never gained any friends and very little sympathy, people don't care to sympathize with whiners. If business is dull there is no reason for your feeling that a town has gone to the dogs, run around hanging crepe on every door you enter. Get down to business, perhaps you may find that the lack of stimulus is wrapped in your own efforts. Put a smile on your face that will stick, get a hustle on, keep moving, trying, laugh at the fellow who ignores the progressive method, mark him as a back number and keep right on working. Business good or bad can't place any taxes on your good looks and certainly a smile helps your looks.

PATTERSON HAS MADE GOOD IMPRESSION IN LAUDERDALE COUNTY

Andrew G. Patterson, Morgan's candidate for governor, spoke in Florence Monday to a representative crowd of citizens of that section and his backers believed upon returning here that he had made a definite impression upon the voters of that territory which will develop into votes in the fall. The same opinion was given after Mr. Patterson's journeys to other North Alabama counties. The same expression will be voiced wherever Mr. Patterson is heard, he is a powerful speaker, a thinking speaker, a man who does not have to resort to the usual political method of exaggeration of what he is going to do. He tells his story in a businesslike manner and his plan of campaign is winning favor with the public. Wherever Mr. Patterson is heard can be counted a Patterson stronghold hereafter.

Mr. Patterson entered this campaign as a business man, a man sound in business principles, principles which he believed could be applied to the matter of state, principles he believes should be inculcated into the governor's office. The Daily anticipates a sane and progressive governmental policy when the Morgan man receives the nomination. His past record has justified such a prediction. His friends realize that their dependence upon him has not been misplaced.

DECATUR PLANS TO HALT TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS THROUGH REGULATION

The move of Decatur city council to add traffic regulation to the city code is indeed gratifying. The city council of Decatur has authorized the purchase and installation of a system which will direct motorists to come to a stop before entering other streets in the congested business district, thus cutting down the probability of so many small accidents.

Traffic regulation in these cities is a quality needed. The reason for so few accidents, though we readily have our share, is not in traffic regulation but in good driving ability. You ask how may good driving ability be determined? The answer is found in the driver who can drive up and down our main thoroughfares jamming brakes here to prevent running into someone, anyone who can unravel the mystery of driving on main streets of these cities is not only a driver of repute, a driver of note, but a good driver with an exceptional amount of the sixth sense, namely intuition, knowing how to take care of yourself and your car though in the midst of a whirling maelstrom reflects credit upon any man or woman maneuvering automobiles about the streets of the cities.

The Decatur city council has taken the first step, a significant step, in that other regulation is expected to follow when needed. Once the motorists of these cities see the tremendous value of traffic regulation then they will be in accord with any traffic regulation that looks toward the betterment of driving conditions.

ABANDONMENT OF PLAN TO PAVE
"ECHOLS HILL" IS IMPRACTICAL

The state highway commission is considering a plan for changing the route of the Bee Line highway, removing the present route some blocks to the west and eliminating "Echols Hill." This plan is only up for consideration by the highway commission and has not as yet received definite approval or disapproval. It is believed that should the commission decide to change the present route that all plans for the construction or paving of "Echols Hill" will be abandoned.

The Daily pauses to wonder just when this commission will decide upon the route-changing plan and just what the commission will decide to do at the time the machinery is taken from the Moulton road. The commission should remember that while there is plenty of time for parleys, that parleys were held two years ago and that the commission agreed to do some work on "Echols Hill" at that time. That was two years ago and as yet there has been very little accomplished in placing the highway link in any sort of condition that is favorable to people here or to people coming into or going from this point.

The commission does say, however, that they are contemplating this change in the route at the time the Tennessee river bridge is complete. So far as we know that is at some time in the future, presumably in 1927 and in the meantime we must suffer the humiliation and discomfort arising from the "Echols Hill" situation.

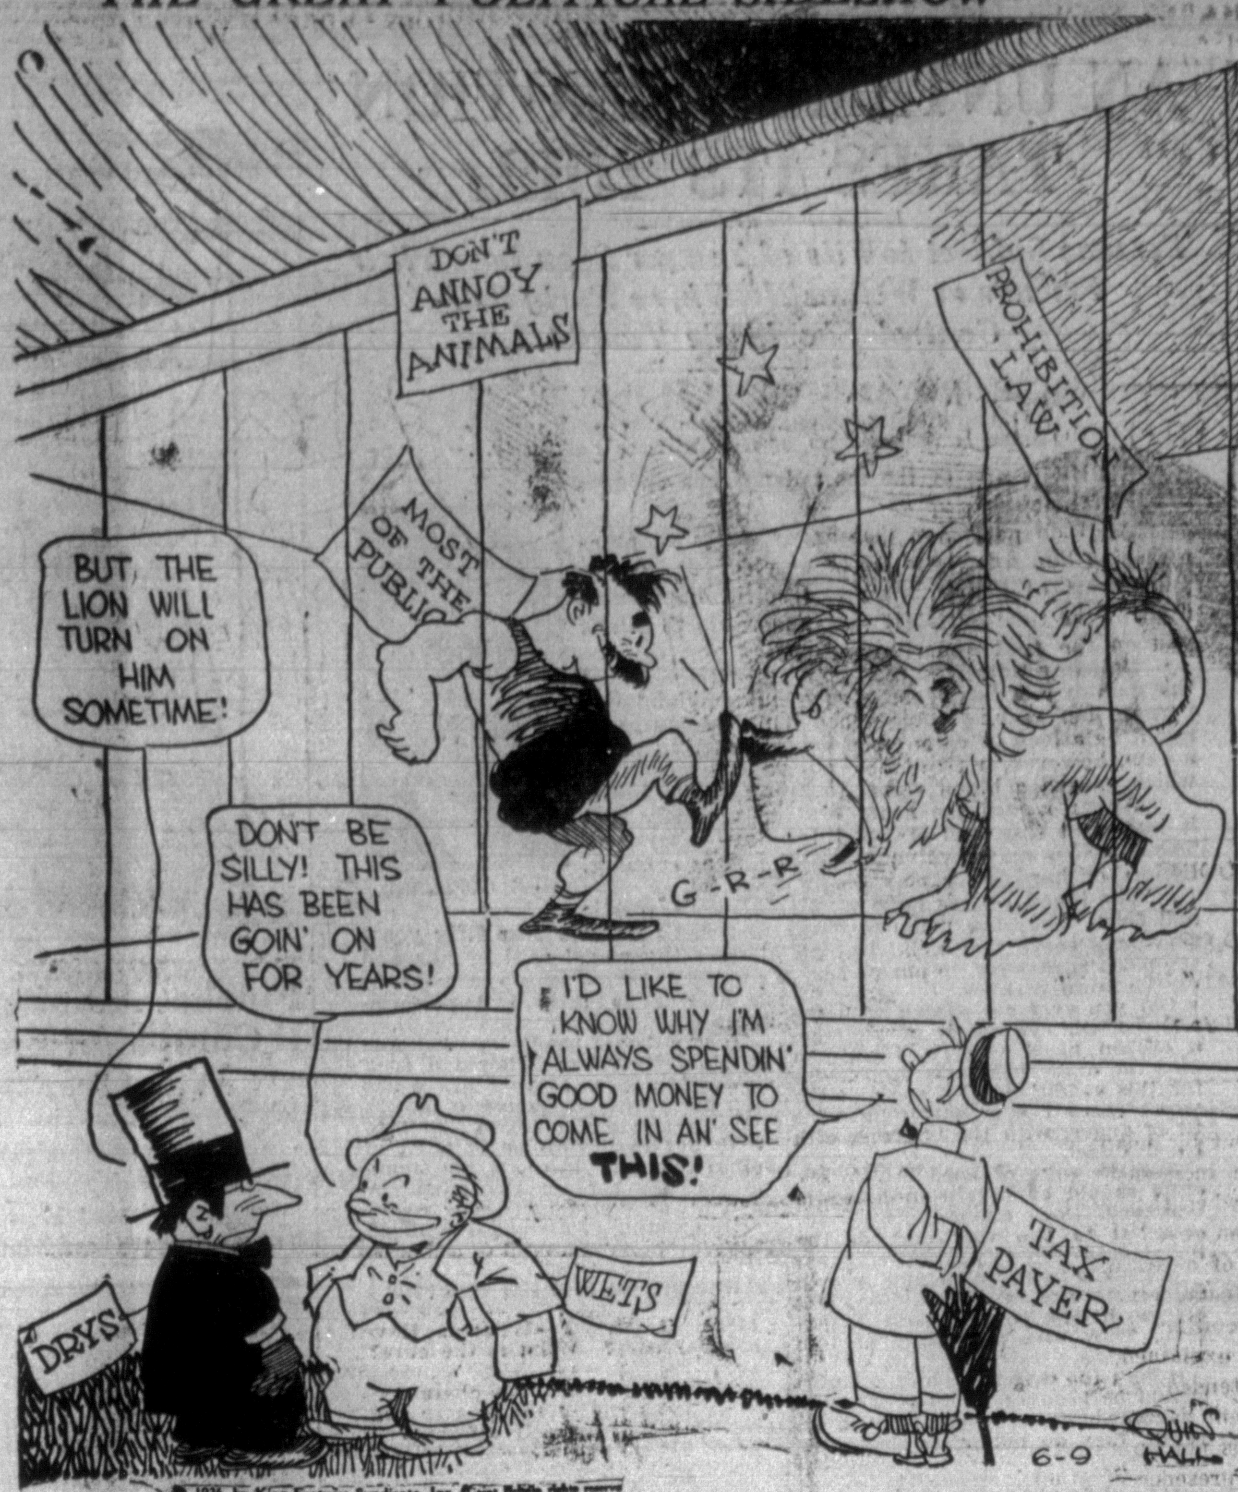

Perhaps the highway commission is not thoroughly conversant with the situation in this county. Perhaps that body is not aware that Albany-Decatur is in actual need of the inlet and outlet on the Bee Line highway, that the people here not only feel that the situation is keeping trade away from the cities, but have actual occurrences in mind. Pat is fed to the flames of discontent when these same people, including the writer, go over that particular section of highway designated as "Echols Hill."

At any rate it is not reasonable to assume that the hill is going to be abolished upon the re-routing of the Bee Line highway. There are people who must travel this road for that section of Albany is thickly settled, people have automobiles and they do not desire to take a long way around in getting home. There is no harm in having two inlets to the city, certainly the people of Albany-Decatur will welcome the project.

Of course there has been no action taken by the Albany city council, regarding this new plan, but it is safely said by The Daily that the Albany city council will not prove adverse in meeting the state highway commission at least halfway. We dare say that if the state desires to build a new road running into the Bee Line highway from another section, that the City of Albany will agree to rebuild and maintain "Echols Hill," being assured that the state is undertaking the work at once. We cannot see the need for waiting until the completion of the new highway bridge before a road is built here, either on the proposed route or on the old route. We have already waited two years to have something done and nothing has been done. What the people of these cities want now is some action along the line of roadbuilding of this particular sector, they have listened to parleys and proposals long enough. This condition is not at all good for the business nor the traveling classes of these cities and when you have spoken of these classes then you have nearly covered everyone in the cities.

The Daily wishes to make its position entirely clear in the matter of asking for this construction. The Daily enters into no political phase in asking that the highway commission do something with this project. The Daily is asking that something be done to relieve a situation that is growing steadily worse and believes that the highway commission will see the folly of waiting so long a time before anything is accomplished.

The commission is building the Moulton road at this time and it will prove interesting and provide an actual insight into the local situation when the Daily states that at completion the Moulton road will stand as the only highway leading into the Twin Cities without a break somewhere either just at the borders of the cities, or within three to ten miles of these towns. That is the situation that we are facing here and it is in the interest of relieving this situation that The Daily dedicates its effort to gain an outlet and inlet for Albany-Decatur. We have waited two years for something to be done on Echols Hill and do not feel that we are asking "out of season" when we ask at this time that the Bee Line highway be repaired either at the old point or built at the new. Regardless of what is done The Daily petitions the highway commission to get it done now and stop waiting until the highway bridge is completed. Our needs cannot wait.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., June 9—The annual invitation golf tournament of the Montgomery Country Club will be held here on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, June 24, 25 and 26. Entries are expected from over the entire South, with many Alabamians slated to compete. The tournament has been waged as an annual affair and always had a large field of contestants.

In 1925 the tournament was not held due to the fact that on the eve of the meet the country clubhouse burned to the ground. This year the Country club boasts of one of the most magnificent club houses in the South and plans have been made to entertain all contestants and witnesses in these new quarters.

Invitations for the tournament have been mailed out. These include golfers of other states as well as many in Alabama. The field will be a large one and will go sixteen flights!

Glenn Crisman, of Selma, Ala., won the last tournament which was held in 1924.

WAY FOUND TO GIVE POISON GAS ALARM

Danger of Monoxide To Be Overcome Soon, Is Belief Now

By ROBERT S. THORNBURGH
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Gas alarms—a vivid reminder of the old and costly of the Western Front—will be revived to protect heavy automobile traffic through tunnels. Owing to the generation of carbon monoxide by automobile motors the United States Bureau of Mines has found it essential as a life-protection measure, to devise an alarm and render for this fatal gas. Experiments were conducted at the Bureau of Mines station in Pittsburgh resulting in the invention of an automatic warning to traffic of the existence of a dangerous concentration of carbon monoxide. Carbon monoxide an odorless, tasteless and invisible gas, was a source of danger in the tightly closed dugouts during the war.

Poison Auto Gases
Experimental work conducted by the bureau of mines showed that the percentage of carbon monoxide, the poisonous constituent of automobile exhaust gases, varies from .5 to .14 percent of the gases, the bureau's statement said.

It was found that harmful effects on persons traversing tunnels may result from exposure to concentrations of carbon monoxide exceeding four parts in 10,000 parts of air. The results of these tests were made use of in designing the ventilating system of the great vehicular tunnels under Hudson River, at New York, which now nearing completion. The data obtained for the Hudson River tunnel were applied also to the vehicular tunnels at Pittsburgh, which consist of twin tunnels 3 feet long.

To aid in the maintenance of safe conditions in the Liberty tunnels, an apparatus that would automatically remove and record even extremely low concentrations of carbon monoxide was desired and the development of a suitable recorder was undertaken at the Pittsburgh experiment station of the Bureau of Mines.

Detecting the Gas
The principle employed in the design of the carbon monoxide recorder is measurement by means of thermocouples of the increased temperature of the gases when the carbon monoxide and oxygen react chemically in the presence of a catalyst; the thermoelectric effects being recorded by means of a recording potentiometer, the statement explained.

"After extended experimentation and development a recorder was produced, which is not appreciably affected by the presence of other gases and which is capable of indicating and continuously recording the highly diluted carbon monoxide. Operation over a period of many months has proved it to be reliable."

The gas alarm is equipped with a bell to warn attendants in the fan house when carbon monoxide at any time exceeds the danger concentration of "four to 10,000."

For one thing, these great cars are built, not assembled. What's more, there are few cars at any price that receive as many exacting inspections. Experts in both plants carefully go over every car inch by inch, testing this, testing that, testing everything.

Study the specifications of these cars. Check up horsepower, strength of chassis, length of springs. Measure seat widths, leg-room, head clearance. Simply compare what you find in them with what you find in other cars of similar prices.

Both Chandler and Cleveland are particularly noted for their big, powerful motors—of quiet, long-lived "L" head design, with high-pressure lubrication. And both cars have the great labor-saving, worry-saving, car-saving advantages of "One Shot" centralized chassis lubrication!

Study the Sixes. Ride in them one after another. Learn all the facts. Then you can choose with certainty.

GARDEN PARTY GIVEN AT THE WILLIAMSON HOME

June, the month of roses, is proving to be the month of flowers, as was shown on Tuesday, June eighth, when the gardens and lawns at the home of Mrs. G. D. Williamson on Ferry street was a riot of blooms when Mrs. Williamson, Mrs. J. T. Jones and Mrs. Clyde Hendrix entertained their friends at a garden party.

The beauty of the soft green carpet underfoot and the interlacing foliage overhead was enhanced with the various garden flowers and plants in boxes. Baskets of mid-summer blossoms tied with pink tulle were hung at intervals all over the front lawn, on one side of which Misses Babye Bess Bailey, Marjory Pointer, Margaret Speake and Mrs. Neil Speake served punch from a bowl embedded in bunches of ripe cherries and grapes. On this same side the Maypole dance, preceded by a dance number by Misses Elizabeth Malone and Mary Battle Hendrix, was given beautifully for each group of guests by Misses Julia Leigh Lynn, Louie Moore Pointer, Clara Berry Hunt, Blanche Buchanan, Mary Battle Hendrix, Elizabeth Malone, Lucile Giles, Frances Barnes, Helen Kingsbury, Frances Mason, Louise Coffee and Bernice Himes.

A concealed orchestra provided delightful music during the hours of entertainment from four to six o'clock. Garden seats and tables were placed on the other side of the lawn and seated here and there guests were served dainty refreshments of ice cream and cake by the May nymphs, each plate being decorated in the color motif of green and pink, which was emphasized throughout.

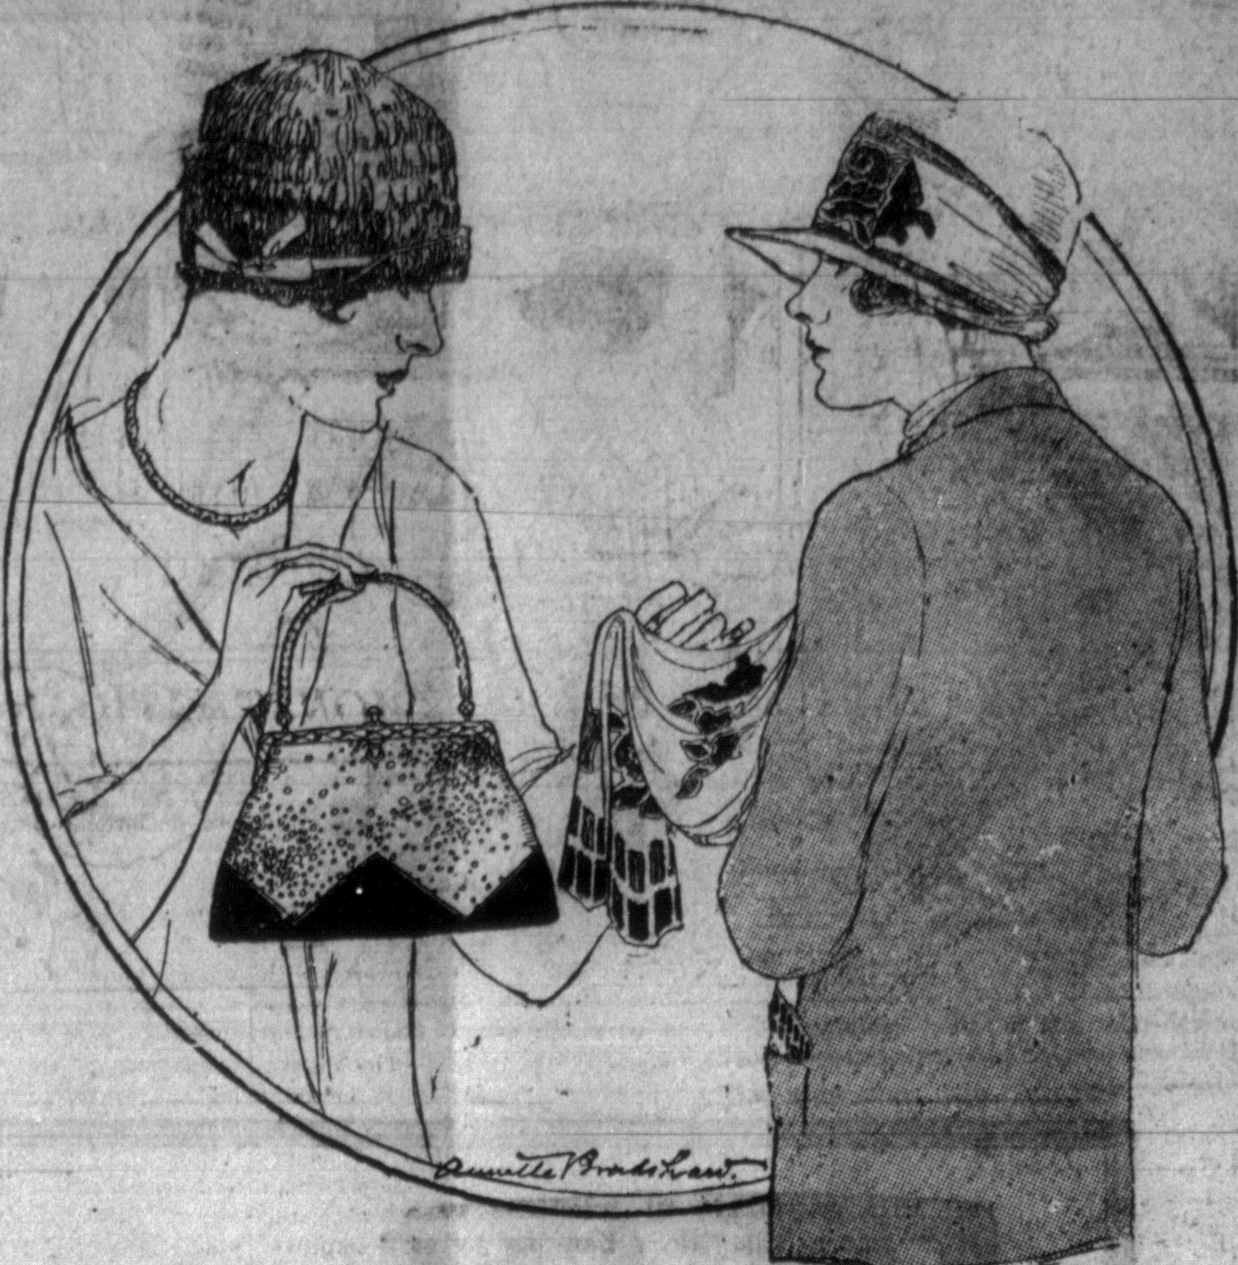

Assisting in receiving and ushering the guests to and fro were Mesdames J. H. Pointer, W. T. Lowe, W. C. Bailey, E. J. Polhill, W. E. Roper, J. H. McMath, W. W. Fussell, Vera Austelle, J. W. Cunningham, D. W. Speake, H. A. Skeggs, W. H. Simpson, L. J. Ramage, William Kimbrough of Hartselle, S. A. Lynne, R. E. Hewlette, W. W. Callahan and A. A. Jones.

Among those invited were:

Mrs. D. C. Adams, Mrs. E. H. Allison, Mrs. D. C. Almon, Mrs. Milton Andrews, Mrs. T. Zeno Bailey, Mrs. E. D. Bailey, Mrs. Fred Bailey, Mrs. J. W. Bailey, Mrs. V. C. Bailey, Mrs. W. M. FARM DEMONSTRATION NOTES

The Danville Home Demonstration club met at the school building May 27th. The meeting was called to order by the president at 1:30 o'clock. The secretary being absent, the roll was called from Miss Hamilton's book. Each member present answered with a report of work done since last meeting, several excellent reports being made as to work done. The discussion as to the best use of the fund made at our community party was entered into. It was moved and adopted that the club adopt Mr. Barnes plan in adding several new windows in the school auditorium, and other improvements. A fund of $5,000 was set aside for club incidentals.

Mrs. R. E. Hardwick, G. W. Lindsey and Leonard Heflin were appointed to work with the school trustees in getting this improvement done. Mesdames J. S. Sims, Dee Watson and J. W. Tomlinson were appointed to work with the Albany-Decatur Kiwanis club in the clinic drive.

Our lesson was on textiles and clothing. Miss Hamilton gave us some very valuable information as to the dyeing and also the construction of material. There being no further business the club was adjourned till the next regular meeting.

Signed, Mrs. John Kell, Act. Sec.
Mrs. J. W. Tomlinson, President.

EVA 4-H CLUB MEETS

The Eva Club girls held their regular meeting at the school building June 2nd. In the absence of the president and secretary, Miss Agnes Bates and Miss Winona Merrell acted in their places respectively.

Miss Hamilton gave a demonstration on hemming, which was interesting and instructive. Plans for the meeting of July 7th were discussed. Miss Hamilton gave the details of the County Short Course, which many of the girls hope to attend. After practicing songs and yells the club adjourned with the club pledge. Signed: Winona Merrell.

SWEET POTATO PLANTS MUST BE CERTIFIED

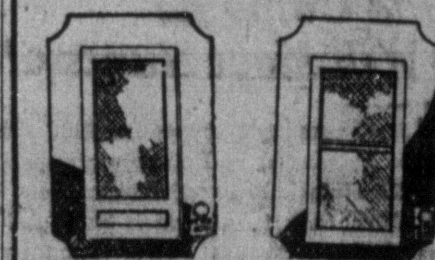

J. C. Ford, County Agent
B. P. Livingston, chief of the division of plant industry, state department of agriculture sends out the following announcement:

Due to the increased danger in the spread of sweet potato diseases such as black rot, stem rot, etc., this department feels it highly necessary for the protection of sweet potato growers, to promulgate a regulation requiring inspection and certification of all sweet potato plants sold in the state of Alabama whether grown in this state or other states. Government reports show that during the year 1924 the potato growers of Alabama suffered a loss of more than $100,000 due to stem rot and black rot. During the year 1927 and thereafter no plants will be allowed to be sold in this state that have not been inspected and certified. The state department of agriculture has inspectors who will gladly make inspections for any plant grower who desires to sell plants during the year 1927.

To certify these plants it will be necessary for our inspectors to make three inspections, the first inspection to be made in the field before the potatoes are dug, the second in the storage house and the third in the plant bed after the plants are entirely above ground.

Our inspectors will start on their rounds during the early part of July and would like to make all inspections on their first trip over the state.

PEP is Vitality

More energy will increase your earning ability
It is the red blooded people who win success in this world. Red blood gives men and women the vitality—the energy—the strength and the activity to earn what they deserve!
Nobody can do justice to themselves when they are suffering from want of rich, red blood. It is this impoverished condition of the blood that causes so many failures in life. There's no place at the top for the weakling—the men and women with poor, weak blood.
Build up your blood! Get in the red-blooded class—and get the rewards you deserve. S. S. S. will do it for you! S. S. S. helps Nature build millions of red blood cells!
S. S. S. sends rich, red blood tingling to every fibre of your body and every pore of your skin. You are fairly radiant with energy, vim and vitality.
You'll look like success, too! The rich, red blood that S. S. S. builds for you will clear your skin of any ugly blemishes—your eyes will sparkle with enthusiasm—firm, solid flesh will round out your figure—strength and power will come to weak, flabby muscles.
All drug stores sell S. S. S. The larger bottle is more economical.

LIFE—Is what you make it. If the record is commendable the praises are yours. If of a degrading nature, the fault is entirely yours. What does life hold for you? J. A. Thornhill.

George Brown says, a man spends a third of his life wondering what he wants, a third in getting it, and a third in wondering what he's gonna do with it.

Mistress (angrily): I never heard such imprudence in all my life. You have a lot of nerve to call yourself a lady's maid.

New Maid: I don't call myself that now, ma'am; but I was a lady's maid before I got this job.

THE RAINY DAY

The day is cold and dark and dreary
It rains and the wind is never weary;

The vine still clings to the mouldering wall,
But at every gust the dead leaves fall,

And the day is dark and dreary.
It rains and the wind is never weary;

My thoughts still cling to the mouldering past,
But the hopes of youth fall thick in the blast,

And the days are dark and dreary.
Be still, sad heart, and cease repining;

Behind the clouds is the sun still shining,
Thy fate is the common fate of all,

Into each life some rain must fall,
Some days must be dark and dreary.

When the tie arrives for the meek to inherit the earth we predict there will be an oil shortage.

"Do you handle bread?"
"Yes, sir."

"Then give me some that you haven't handled."

We always admire "truth" in the abstract; in other words, until the truthful person begins to talk about us.

A man arrested for begging in Montreal says he has not had a dollar's worth of silver in his pocket in six months. What an ideal taxi driver.

Marriage is a lottery, with every fellow biting at it disappointed because he failed to get the capital prize. Life is a mirror for king and for slave.

'Tis just what you are and do,
Then give to the world the best you have.

And the best will come back to you.

Judging by the amount the champion prize fighters hold out for they ought to be called price fighters.

Why do girls leave home? Well nobody likes to be at home alone.

The modern girl must wonder how her noble mother learned the things she tells daughter to shun.

Nurse: Barbara, won't you give your little brother part of your apple?
Barbara—No. Eve did that, and she's been criticized ever since.

The Bible isn't the only thing people interpret to suit themselves. There's the Constitution.

A movement is on foot to make French the universal language, because this is the only language in which "Please Remit" doesn't mean anything.

She (waiting at door for her sweetheart to kiss her): Well Jack, what are you waiting for?

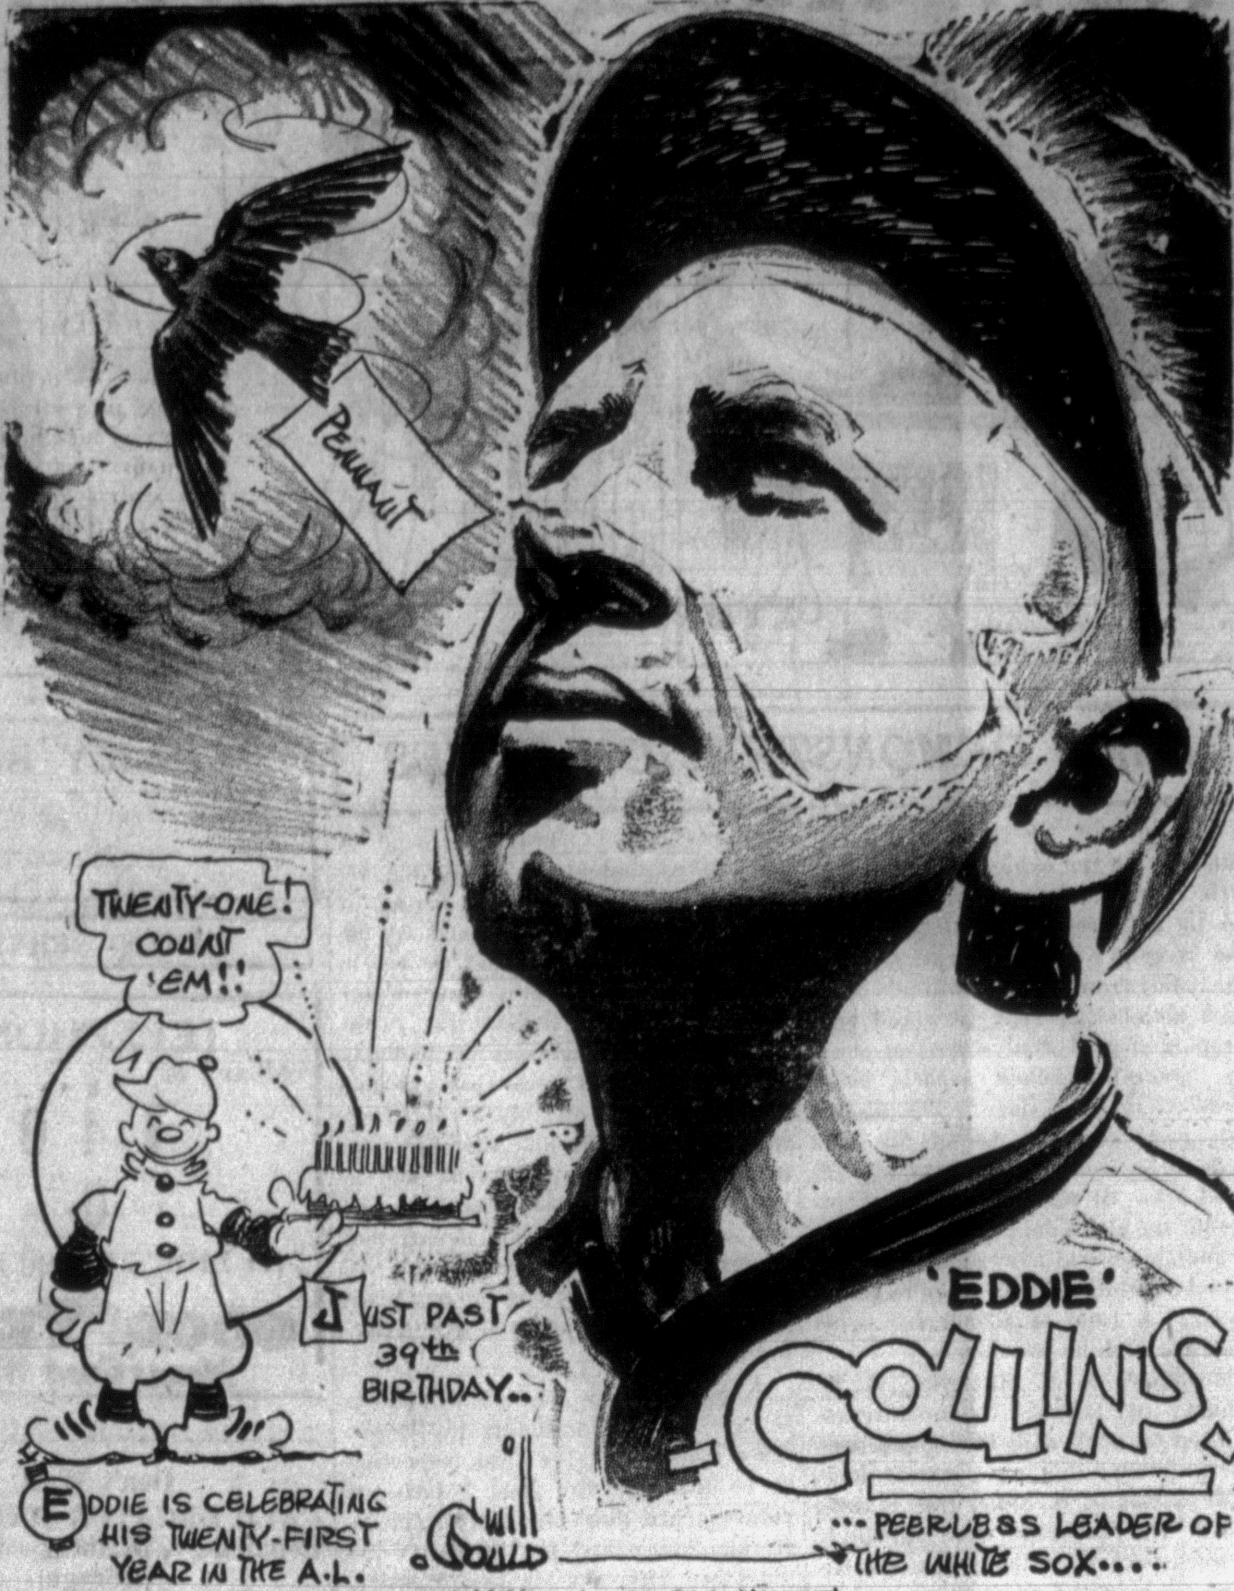

Jack: For the paint to dry.

Son—I say, Daddy, when people go to heaven do they become angels right away, or have they to pass a lot of stupid examinations first?

Hartselle and Falkville Combine Strength; Will Meet Huntsville

Playing strength of Hartselle and Falkville have been combined, according to word received here, and a fast baseball machine to represent the two Morgan County cities has been perfected.

The first game of the season for the consolidated club has been scheduled for Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock to be played in Falkville against the Merrimack Mills of Huntsville. The Merrimack team, which twice defeated the Alabama Power company in close contests last year is said to be even stronger this year.

Back in 1914 the Boston Braves pulled a trick from their baseball bag which never before had been duplicated, and never has since. They started from the bottom of the league on July 4 and went to the top, winning the national league bunting and then defeated Connie Mack's Athletics in four straight games for the world's championship. Fans who recall this unparalleled campaign wonder if the present spurt of the Braves is a forerunner of any such startling upset.

Floyd Tuck, former Albany high school star, has about decided to enter the University of Alabama this fall. He will not be eligible for the varsity before next year, but sport followers here believe he will bring further fame for 'Bama when he dons the Crimson and White. Two local football fans, speculating in futures a bit, already have made an agreement to go to Birmingham in 1927 to see Tuck and Pepper play again, side by side, but for Alabama, instead of Albany high school.

"More and Better Sewell's" is the slogan of Cleveland baseball fans, according to a writer in a New York paper, who predict that the time may come when Tris Speaker will be the only outsider on the team and the rest of the gang will be "Tom, Dick, Harry, Mark, Luke, etc. Sewell."

Late Batting Averages Reveal Big Slump For Mighty Sluggers

By DAVID J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK—

Testifying before the coroner's jury on a fatal railroad accident, Swen Swenson gave the following version of the affair:

"Ole Olsen and me ban walking down track. Aye ban hear whistle and walk off track. The train, she pass, and then aye look for Ole. Aye no see him and aye say to myself 'Something, she happen to Ole Olsen.'"

Something seems to have happened, also, to some of our best people in major league baseball. A glance at the recent batting averages is sufficient to reveal the fact that quite a few of the old stars either are succumbing to the inevitable or are simply in the throes of a protracted slump.

How the mighty have fallen! In fact, some of them are mighty at the current writing, only in the sense that they are mighty low.

On Memorial Day, Tris Speaker, one of the great names of all time and the league leader until the final day of the 1925 season, removed himself from the Indian line up. Poor hitting was the answer. Topping the league at this time last year with .463, Speaker was down around .245 and evidently believed that heroic measures were necessary, for he benched Charley Jamieson, another good hitter, at the same time. Charles was batting .245 at that moment. Of course, the shift was regarded as merely a temporary measure.

On or about the same date, George Sisler was hitting below .300 for the first time in his career; Ken Williams was down to .288 and Harry Heilmann, the league champion, was fifty points below his normal speed, although hitting .336 at that.

Of the American League's d timers only the peerless Ty and Eddie Collins seemed able to comport themselves at the plate in the style to which they were accustomed.

As for the National League, some of its big timers were not doing any too well, either. Roberts Hornsby, perennial champion, was all the way down to .333 at the time. This mark is "up" to most batters, but it is "down" to Hornsby. Jim Bottomly, his team-mate, was more than 100 points below his 1925 speed, his average being .255.

Meantime, Zach Wheat was hitting .287, Max Carey, slowly recovering from a winter illness, was almost out of sight at .198, and Barnhart, another 1925 slugger had sunk as low as .143. He was taken out of the Pirate lineup and so was Eddie Moore, with an average of .190.

Other early reversals were noted in the cases of Eddie Roush, .294; Frank Snyder, .159; Gus Felix, .252; Dick Burros, .255; Dave Bancroft, .276; and Emil Meusel, .282.

Perhaps it was the cold weather; perhaps the 'dead' ball annoyed the boys or maybe it just simply happen-
